Department of Criminology, Law and Society George Mason University

Assistant Professor, Tenure Track Position

The Department of Criminology, Law and Society invites applicants for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to start August 2017. We are seeking candidates with active research agendas in any area of criminology, criminal justice, and law and society. Priority areas for our department include law and society, empirical legal studies, cross-national and comparative criminology, juvenile justice, terrorism and security, and advanced quantitative and statistical methods.

A PhD in the social sciences or relevant field of study is required; we welcome applicants who hold both a PhD and JD degree. Applicants nearing the completion of their doctorate will be considered. The successful candidate should be strongly committed to teaching in a multidisciplinary undergraduate and graduate program and demonstrate significant promise in scholarly research and extramural grant activity.

Review of applications will begin on September 15, 2016 and continue until the position is filled. Applicants must apply online at <http://jobs.gmu.edu> for position number F6877z; complete the faculty application; and attach a cover letter, CV, and representative research articles. Also, three letters of reference should be submitted, either through e-mail to clsjobs@gmu.edu; or via USPS mail to Ms. Sharon Corradino, Criminology, Law, and Society, George Mason University, 4400 University Drive, MS 4F4, Fairfax, VA 22030. Inquiries about the position can be addressed to the department chair, David Wilson, at dwilsonb@gmu.edu.

The Department of Criminology, Law and Society is a multidisciplinary unit located on the Fairfax campus that offers degrees at the bachelor's, master's, and doctoral levels. Our graduate program balances theory, empirical research, and policy applications. Our undergraduate program has concentrations in law and society, criminal justice, and homeland security. More information on the department and the research activities of the faculty and various research centers are available at <http://cls.gmu.edu/>. George Mason University is an equal opportunity employer encouraging diversity.
