GUEST WIFI AT GMU IS FREE AND OBTAINED VIA SELF-REGISTRATION.

On your device, select “MASON” as your wireless network (NOT Mason-secure). Go to your web browser and enter “itservices.gmu.edu”. The self-registration portal will appear. Click on “Create an Account” and enter your information to complete the self-registration. After registering for an account, you will be provided with a temporary username and password that are active for seven days.

Since 2008, the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy has been committed to providing you with high-quality research and research translation tools.

We need your help to continue our efforts for the next 10 years.

If you have attended our symposia, congressional briefings, or special workshops, read Translational Criminology Magazine or our handy “One-Pagers,” used the Evidence-Based Policing Matrix or Dave Wilson’s Systematic Review Toolkit, or watched our countless knowledge videos, then you know the value that CEBCP brings to the field.

With your support, we can continue to make science an important part of criminal justice policy. Donate today so that we can raise $100,000 to support the next ten years of the CEBCP.

ADJOURN

The Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy at George Mason University would like to thank you for your support and for participating in our events. We especially appreciate all of the presenters who make our events successful.

The CEBCP is made possible through the team effort of CEBCP graduate assistants and staff members, as well as the contributions of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences and the Office of the Provost at George Mason University. We also express our heartfelt thanks to those who make our events extra special, including University Catering, the Arlington Campus Events Management Office, and University Facilities.

Distinguished Achievement Award in Evidence-Based Crime Policy

The Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy established the “CEBCP Distinguished Achievement Award in Evidence-Based Crime Policy” in 2010. This award recognizes outstanding achievements and contributions by individuals in academia, practice, or the policy arena who are committed to a leadership role in advancing the use of scientific research evidence in decisions about crime and justice policies. This role includes notable efforts in connecting criminology, law and society researchers with criminal justice institutions, or advancing scientific research more generally in crime and justice.

Evidence-Based Policing Hall of Fame 2019 Inductees

The Evidence-Based Policing Hall of Fame recognizes innovative law enforcement practitioners who have been central to the implementation of a high-quality research program in their agency and also are relentless champions of institutionalizing evidence-based practices. These leaders of evidence-based policing not only help make high-quality police scholarship possible but also advance significant reforms in policing by utilizing science in their decision making.

ABOUT OUR PRESENTERS

BRIAN AAGAARD

Brian Aagaard, a member of RTI's Policing Research Program, has extensive experience as a crime and intelligence analyst. Mr. Aagaard worked with law enforcement at the local, county, state, and federal levels for more than a decade. His areas of expertise include the collection, management, and analysis of law enforcement data. Mr. Aagaard's current work focuses on the intersection of policing, technology, and analysis. He is particularly interested in the dynamics of law enforcement-community interactions, specifically during routine encounters such as traffic stops.

KYLE ANDERSON

Kyle Anderson is Research Associate with Justice & Security Strategies Inc. During his tenure with JSS, Kyle has worked on research grants involving the Los Angeles Crime Gun Intelligence Center, evaluation of body-worn cameras and procedural justice, and LAPD's transition to the National Incident Based Reporting System (NIBRS). Kyle's research interests include evidence-based policing, technology, and predictive analytics. Kyle holds a Master of Science degree in Criminology and Criminal Justice from California State University, Long Beach.

MATT BARTER

Sergeant Matthew Barter has been with the Manchester Police Department for 10 years and is currently assigned to the patrol division. He was previously a Task Force Officer with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives and a Crime Analyst with the Crime Analysis Unit. Sergeant Barter has implemented numerous evidence-based policing practices within the agency, to include a data-driven hotspot policing concept and violent crime reduction initiatives. Recently, Sergeant Barter worked to integrate National Integrated Ballistic Information Network (NIBIN) technology and gun crime intelligence into strategic planning processes with law enforcement partners. He holds a master's degree and bachelor's degree in criminal justice and is interested in pursuing research regarding police patrol patterns as well as place-based crime. Sergeant Barter is a member of the 2018 NIJ and IACP LEADS Scholar program. In addition, he serves as a SWAT Officer and leads the Tactical Emergency Medical Support Unit.

AXTON BETZ-HAMILTON

Axton Betz-Hamilton, PhD, AFC® is an Assistant Professor of Consumer Affairs at South Dakota State University. She focuses much of her research on identity theft, specifically child identity theft and familial identity theft. Dr. Betz-Hamilton's research interests developed as a result of her personal experience as a victim of familial identity theft, in a case that spanned 20 years. Her personal experience is the focus of a forthcoming book, The Less People Know About Us: A Mystery of Betrayal, Family Secrets, and Stolen Identity.

LUKE BONKIEWICZ

Officer Bonkiewicz is a police officer with the Lincoln Police Department. He has over ten years of experience in not only patrol, recruitment, pre-employment interviewing, and background investigations, but also quantitative research methods and data analysis. He has analyzed data on racial disparities in traffic stops, driver's license suspension programs, gang intervention initiatives, assault on officer incidents, and use of control incidents. He has also published peer-reviewed research on patrol officer productivity, police response to mental health calls for service, violence in drug markets, and the role of police in disasters and evacuations. Currently assigned to LPD's Management Services Unit, Officer Bonkiewicz writes LPD's grants, assists with CALEA accreditation, identifies and develops evidence-based policies and practices, and coordinates research projects involving LPD's academic partners.

HENRY H. BROWNSTEIN

Dr. Henry H. Brownstein is a Distinguished Research Professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology in the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences at West Virginia University. He has been Associate Dean for Research in the Wilder School at Virginia Commonwealth University (2014-2017); a Senior Vice President and Senior Fellow at NORC at the University of Chicago (2005-2014); Director of the Center on Crime, Drugs, and Justice at Abt Associates (2004-05); Director of the Drugs and Crime Division at the National Institute of Justice (2000-2004); Professor and Director of the Graduate Program in Criminal Justice at the University of Baltimore (1995-2000); a Principal Researcher, the Statistical Analysis Center Director, and the Chief of Statistical Services for the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services (1982-95); and an Assistant Professor at Russell Sage College (1977-82). In addition, he has conducted research and policy studies for other organizations including National Development and Research Institutes, Inc. (NDRI), the Institute for Scientific Analysis, and Gryphon Scientific. Over the years his research has been awarded almost $10 million in grants as Principal or Co-Principal Investigator. He is the author of five books and the editor or co-editor of two more on drugs and society, drug markets, drug policy, and crime and violence. He is the author or co-author of more than 60 journal articles and book chapters as well as several government reports, essays, and op-ed articles. He was awarded his PhD in sociology from Temple University in 1977. He is the recipient of the Senior Scholar Award for 2017 from the American Sociological Association Section on Alcohol, Drugs, and Tobacco.

JIMMY CHAPMAN

James A. Chapman is the Assistant Chief of Police for the Roanoke County (VA) Police Department. He has over 23 years of progressive law enforcement experience and currently commands the Administrative Division. In his role, he directs the Professional Standards Division, Services Division, Roanoke County Criminal Justice Academy, and manages the Department's operating budget (~$12M). Since 2015, Assistant Chief Chapman has worked closely with researchers from the Center of Evidence-Based Crime Policy at GMU on a Strategies for Policing Innovation (SPI) grant from the Bureau of Justice Assistance to conduct a randomized control trial for a mobile crisis response model. He has played a crucial role in ensuring the integrity of the experiment at an operational level.

Assistant Chief Chapman is a graduate of the FBI National Academy Session 244 and graduate of Police Executive Research Forum - Senior Management Institute for Police. He holds a BA in Criminal Justice from State University of New York (SUNY) at Brockport and a MS in Criminal Justice with a concentration in Leadership from Northeastern University.

AMANDA CHARBONNEAU

Amanda Charbonneau is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Violence Prevention Research Program in the Department of Emergency Medicine at the University of California, Davis. Her work examines the effects of policies on practitioner judgment and decision making. She is investigating the role of suspicion, as both a legal and psychological construct, in proactive policing practices. Amanda is also conducting research on the relationships between agency-level police use-of-force policies and practices. She holds a PhD from the Goldman School of Public Policy at the University of California, Berkeley.

KEN CLARY

Captain Ken Clary has worked for the Iowa State Patrol since 1994 and currently serves as an Area Commander, which involves the oversight of four patrol districts totaling approximately one quarter of the State of Iowa. Captain Clary received his Masters in Public Administration from Upper Iowa University and will begin his work as a PhD Candidate at the University of Nebraska – Omaha this fall. He is a graduate of the FBI National Academy (Session 269), International Association of Chiefs of Police – Leadership in Police Organizations, and the Northwestern University School of Staff and Command. Captain Clary was selected by the National Institute of Justice as a Law Enforcement Advancing Data and Science (LEADS) Scholar in 2016. He is currently working with Dr. Cynthia Lum and Dr. Chris Koper at George Mason University to implement a multi-year project and associated study within his Area. This project involves the utilization of hot spot police interactions, Koper Curve, and community policing, attempting to reduce rural traffic crashes and resulting fatalities. His other research includes officer involved shootings, and intrinsic bias.

AMY K. COOK

Amy K. Cook is an Associate Professor and chair of the criminal justice program in the L. Douglas Wilder School of Government and Public Affairs at Virginia Commonwealth University. Her current research examines local criminal justice system responses to substance abuse, particularly as it relates to opioids. Prior to academia, Amy spent over 14 years as a probation officer with the Virginia Department of Juvenile Justice where she worked with delinquent youth, families, and victims of intimate partner violence. Amy was also a member of the Fatality Review Team, which reviewed intimate partner and family related homicides.

DEWEY CORNELL

Dewey G. Cornell, Ph.D., is a forensic clinical psychologist who holds the Bunker Chair as Professor of Education in the Curry School of Education and Human Development at the University of Virginia. During his clinical and academic career, Dr. Cornell has worked with juvenile and adult violent offenders, testified in criminal proceedings and legislative hearings, and consulted on violence prevention efforts. He has authored more than 200 publications in psychology and education, including studies of juvenile homicide, school safety, bullying, and threat assessment. He is the principal author of the Virginia Student Threat Assessment Guidelines, which is an evidence-based model of school threat assessment used in schools across the United States and Canada. He also led the development of the Authoritative School Climate Survey as a student and staff measure of school climate and safety conditions. He is currently directing statewide studies of both school climate and threat assessment in Virginia public schools with funding from the U. S. Department of Justice.

ARIE CROITORU

Dr. Croitoru is an Associate Professor at the Departments of Geography and Geoinformation Science at George Mason University and the Director of the College of Science Center for Geospatial and Open-Source Intelligence at Mason. He received his Ph.D. in Geoinformation Engineering in 2002, and was a postdoctoral fellow at the National Center for Geographic Information and Analysis (NCGIA) at the University of Maine. Dr. Croitoru's expertise is in geoinformatics, with a particular focus on spatial and spatiotemporal data mining and knowledge discovery and open-source geospatial information. Dr. Croitoru's work has been focusing on the harvesting, management, and analysis of social media and other open source data for developing a deeper understanding of human activity at the intersection of the cyber and the physical domains. Dr. Croitoru authored more than 60 fully-refereed journal articles, conference papers, and book chapters. In addition, he co-authored 2 patents.

SCOTT CROSSE

Dr. Scott Crosse is an Associate Area Director at Westat with more than 30 years of experience conducting program evaluation and other applied research. His experience includes participation in the Study of School Violence and studies focused on the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act Program. He was principal investigator (PI) for the Study on Multi-Jurisdiction Kiosk (Probation) Supervision and for the Evaluation of the New York City Justice Corps. Dr. Crosse currently serves as co-PI on the Study of Police in Schools.

BEIDI DONG

Dr. Beidi Dong is an Assistant Professor of Criminology, Law and Society at George Mason University. He obtained his PhD from the Department of Sociology and Criminology & Law at the University of Florida, and received postdoctoral training in the Department of Biostatistics, Epidemiology and Informatics at the University of Pennsylvania. His research interests center around understanding the causes of youth violence, identifying risk and protective factors, and promoting resilience among both perpetrators and victims. Firearm and gang-related violence are two areas of focus that lead to both serious physical harm (including death), and emotional and social-behavioral problems in young people. With his interdisciplinary background, Dr. Dong integrates research designs and methods of public health with theories and practices of criminology and criminal justice to enhance public safety.

ELLEN DONNELLY

Ellen Donnelly is an Assistant Professor of Sociology and Criminal Justice at the University of Delaware and a co-investigator on the Delaware Opioid Metric Intelligence Project (DOMIP) at the Center for Drug and Health Studies. Her research broadly examines disparities in the U.S. criminal and juvenile justice systems. She specializes in using statistical methods to estimate the size and sources of disparity in justice processing as well as the impacts of justice reform. Her recent publications will appear in Justice Quarterly, The Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, and Criminal Justice Policy Review. In Delaware, Ellen's research has been supported by the Access to Justice Commission and the State Administrative Office of the Courts. Her work aims to help Delaware policymakers design fairer processing practices.

JEFFERY EGGE

Sgt. Jeffery Egge currently serves as supervisor of Strategic Analysis for the Minneapolis Police Department. In 2018 he was inducted into the Evidence Based Policing Hall of Fame at the Center for Evidence Based Crime Policy and since 2016 has been a National Institute of Justice LEADS Scholar. Sgt. Egge specializes in the study of homicide, gang and gun violence, hot spots and research translation. He has worked in CompStat, Organized Crime, Homicide, and Patrol. Sgt. Egge holds a Master's Degree from the University of St. Thomas in Police Leadership, Administration and Training, and a Bachelor's Degree in Organizational Management from Concordia University. He was a Senior Research Fellow at the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) and has contributed to publications on crime analysis, research and planning, and predictive policing. Prior to joining the MPD, he was an Investigations and Training Specialist and Loss Prevention Manager for Dayton Hudson (now Target Corp).

CHARLOTTE GILL

Dr. Charlotte Gill is an Assistant Professor and Deputy Director of the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy in the Department of Criminology, Law and Society, George Mason University. Her primary research interests are community- and place-based crime prevention approaches, particularly with juveniles and youth; community policing; program evaluation; and research synthesis. Dr. Gill has over ten years of experience in applied experimental and quasi-experimental research and is currently partnering with several police departments and community groups around the United States to develop and test community-led approaches to place-based prevention and improve police responses to people with mental health issues. Dr. Gill also serves as the co-editor of the Campbell Collaboration Crime and Justice Group. She is a 2017-2019

Andrew Carnegie Fellow and received an Outstanding Faculty (Rising Star) Award from the State Council for Higher Education in Virginia in 2019.

MICHAEL C. GREEN

In March of 2012, Governor Cuomo appointed Mr. Green to the position of Executive Deputy Commissioner of the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services. From this post, Green leads the agency whose mission is to enhance public safety by providing resources and services that inform decision-making and improve the quality of the criminal justice system. Included in this portfolio are oversight of the State's DNA database, Criminal History Repository, and Sex Offender Registry. Mr. Green serves as chair of the New York State Commission on Forensic Science. Major initiatives Mr. Green is leading at DCJS include GIVE (Gun Involved Violence Elimination - working with local law enforcement to address shootings with evidence-based strategies and an emphasis on procedural justice), SNUG (a network of 11 street outreach programs), the redevelopment and expansion of the County re-entry Task Force program, the redesign of ATI funding to incorporate evidence-based principles to the delivery of ATI services funded by the state, expansion of the state's network of nine Crime Analysis and Real Time Crime Centers, and implementation of Raise the Age legislation. Under his leadership, DCJS has been recognized as a Top Workplace in the Capital Region by the Albany Times Union based on employee surveys for the last three years. Prior to joining DCJS, Green served for 25 years in the Monroe County District Attorney's Office, including eight years as the elected District Attorney. In 2007, Green was appointed to the NYS Sentencing Reform Commission, and in 2008 to the NYS Juvenile Justice Task Force. Mr. Green was named 2009 Prosecutor of the Year by the New York Prosecutors Training Institute. In 2011, the District Attorney's Association of the State of New York awarded District Attorney Green their Distinguished Service Award, and, in 2012, he received the prestigious Hogan award from the association recognizing a "lifetime of distinguished and honorable service." Mr. Green has served as an adjunct professor in the Criminal Justice Department at Rochester Institute of Technology. He has served as faculty for the National College of District Attorneys at the National Advocacy Center and has lectured for the New York Prosecutors Training Institute.

ELIZABETH GROFF

Elizabeth R. Groff is a Professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Temple University where she is also associated faculty in the Center for Security and Crime Science. She has spent the last 25 years applying geographic theory and methodology to the study of crime-related issues and on developing evidence to improve police practice. Her recent research has examined the impacts of changes in policy on prosecution. Other research interests include geographic criminology, police practices, and the use of technology in policing. She is a fellow of the Academy of Experimental Criminology.

HOWARD B. HALL

Howard B. Hall was sworn in as Chief of the Roanoke County, Virginia Police Department on August 13, 2012. He leads an internationally accredited agency that includes 142 sworn and 16 non-sworn personnel. Dr. Holt's research has appeared in a variety of journals, including Crime & Delinquency, Deviant Behavior, Journal of Criminal Justice, and Terrorism & Political Violence. He has also published numerous books on cybercrime, cyberterror, and policing.

STACEY HOUSTON

Dr. Houston's research interests center around understanding the causes and consequences of justice system involvement. Schooling and racial health disparities are two causes and consequences that are central to his research agenda. Dr. Houston's recent work explores the link between education, justice system involvement, and well-being. More specifically, his work investigates how disciplinary practices in early education contribute to involvement with the justice system, which, in turn, leads to health disparities across racial groups. Dr. Houston is working on a series of projects which focus on life course outcomes for youth as a function of justice system presence, or what he calls "justice system toxic reach." These projects investigate the role that residential proximity to justice facilities plays in deteriorating health of youth. In other words, this line of work investigates the ways in which justice system presence is a systematic environmental health hazard. Dr. Houston utilizes a wide range of quantitative methods with large, longitudinal data-sets. He has expertise in quasi-experimental research designs and has several years of experience with program evaluation. Dr. Houston is currently leading the evaluation of a United Planning Organization reentry program funded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance.

YASEMIN IRVIN-ERICKSON

Dr. Yasemin Irvin-Erickson is an Assistant Professor of Criminology, Law and Society at George Mason University. She received her PhD from Rutgers School of Criminal Justice in 2014. She researches primarily in the area of economic empowerment of vulnerable populations, urban security, victimization, and technology using quantitative and mixed-method study designs. Her recent work in this area includes evaluating the economic impact of violence on vulnerable populations, enablers and barriers to women's economic empowerment, the potential uses of technology in response to violence and victimization, and translating best available evidence on crime and victimization into actionable knowledge for practitioners.

CHRISTOPHER KOPER

Dr. Christopher S. Koper is an Associate Professor in the Department of Criminology, Law and Society at George Mason University and the Principal Fellow of George Mason's Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy. Dr. Koper has 30 years of experience studying crime and justice issues at George Mason, the Police Executive Research Forum, the University of Pennsylvania, the Urban Institute, the RAND Corporation, the Police Foundation, and other organizations. He has written extensively on issues related to policing, firearms, federal crime prevention efforts, research methods, and other topics. Dr. Koper has served as a lead or senior-level investigator on numerous projects for the U.S. Department of Justice and other funders, and as a consultant to the attorney generals and city attorneys of several states and localities. Some of his most prominent works include: studies of the 1994 federal assault weapons ban; the Evidence-Based Policing Matrix tool for policy translation of research on police crime control strategies; and the "Koper curve" principle of hot spots patrol, which is used by many police agencies in the United States and abroad. Dr. Koper is a fellow of the Academy of Experimental Criminology, the co-editor of Criminology and Public Policy (for issues starting in 2020), and the co-author of Evidence-Based Policing: Translating Research into Practice (Oxford University Press).

ADAM LANKFORD

Adam Lankford is an Associate Professor of Criminology and Criminal Justice at The University of Alabama. He is the author of two books and many peer-reviewed journal articles on various types of criminal behavior, including mass murder, mass shootings, and terrorism. His research has examined perpetrators' psychological tendencies, mental health problems, suicidal motives, fame-seeking tactics, copycat behavior, and weapons acquisition—along with the strategies that might be used to prevent their attacks.

DAN LAWRENCE

Daniel Lawrence, PhD, is a Senior Research Associate in the Justice Policy Center at the Urban Institute. He has been on numerous criminal justice-related projects since 2008 in multiple roles, such as principal investigator, project manager, statistician, analyst, and data collector. His research interests are primarily in the law enforcement field, specifically on police technology, police legitimacy and procedural justice, police screening and hiring practices, and community policing. Dr. Lawrence's objective is to produce high-quality empirical research using innovative approaches that are grounded in criminological theory. Before coming to Urban, Dr. Lawrence worked at RTI International's Policing Research Program, where he led multiple evaluations of policing technologies. At the Center for Research in Law and Justice at the University of Illinois at Chicago, Dr. Lawrence was the project manager of the National Police Research Platform, a large-scale study to advance knowledge and practice in American policing. He also served as a research consultant for two Illinois criminal justice research agencies, performing analyses on criminal history record information for recidivism, disproportionate minority youth contact, and Illinois Senate bill impacts, among others.

CYNTHIA LUM

Dr. Cynthia Lum is a Professor of Criminology, Law and Society at George Mason University and Director of its Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy. Her research focuses on policing tactics, strategies, technology, and organization; crime prevention and deterrence; and evidence-based crime policy. With Professors Christopher Koper and Cody Telep, she has developed tools to help translate research into practice. For the National Academy of Sciences, Dr. Lum has been appointed a member of its Committee on Law and Justice, the Standing Committee on Traffic Law Enforcement (Transportation Research Board), as well the Committee on Proactive Policing. She is a member of the Research Advisory Committee of the IACP, and the Misdemeanor Justice Project at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Dr. Lum is a Fulbright Specialist in policing and criminology and the co-founder of the International Summer School for Policing Scholars. She is the founding editor of Translational Criminology magazine. Her new book (with Christopher Koper) is Evidence-Based Policing: Translating Research into Practice (Oxford). Dr. Lum is a former Baltimore City police officer and detective.

MAUREEN MCGOUGH

Maureen Q. McGough is an attorney and Senior Policy Advisor at the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance. Maureen oversees the development and implementation of the Sentinel Events Initiative, an effort to build a mechanism for learning from error in criminal justice that unites criminal justice practitioners and the communities they serve. Maureen also created and manages the Law Enforcement Advancing Data and Science (LEADS) program at the National Institute of Justice, which supports law enforcement officers and agencies to develop and implement their own research agenda and projects, as well as integrate results into policy and practice. Maureen previously served as Counsel in the Office of the Deputy Attorney General, with a focus on countering violent extremism and building communities of resilience. Additional previous experience includes coordinating federal AIDS relief effort for the State Department in Kigali, Rwanda, and serving as a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. She received her JD from the George Washington University School of Law.

DANIEL NAGIN

Daniel S. Nagin is a Teresa and H. John Heinz III University Professor of Public Policy and Statistics at Heinz College, Carnegie Mellon University. ## BRYCE PETERSON

Bryce Peterson is a Principal Research Associate in the Urban Institute's Justice Policy Center. His research focuses on correctional policy, children of justice-involved parents, video surveillance and body-worn camera technologies, and prison population forecasting. He conducts both quantitative and qualitative research and has received grants from several federal and local government agencies. Before joining Urban, Peterson was a research fellow at the Research and Evaluation Center in New York City and a lecturer at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, where he taught criminology, criminal justice, and statistics. He received his PhD in criminal justice from the John Jay College/The Graduate Center, City University of New York.

JASON POTTS

Jason Potts has over 20 years of law enforcement experience. He is a Lieutenant with the Vallejo Police Department where he has served for 18 years and is currently assigned to the patrol division as a watch commander and administrative lieutenant where he leads the department's field training program. Jason is also a military Reserve Special Agent with the Coast Guard Investigative Service (CGIS) and routinely travels to Fort Leonard Wood Missouri to assist with the instruction of trauma-informed interviewing techniques to military agents. Jason has completed two randomized controlled trials (RCT) in his department – one testing the effectiveness of automatic license plate readers and the other testing the deterrent effects of flashing blue and red police lights on auto burglaries and theft in a high-density shopping center. Additionally, Jason conducted a quasi-experiment on theft deterrent strategies during the holiday shopping season where a multitude of interventions were analyzed and assessed. Finally, he, along with another police practitioner recently implemented a third randomized experiment – launched at the annual ASEBP conference to test how virtual reality training may inform future police training. He is a strong advocate for evidence-based policing (EBP) and serves on the board of directors for the American Society of Evidence-Based Policing (ASEBP), is a Police Foundation Fellow, a BetaGov Fellow with NYU, and a National Institute of Justice (NIJ) LEADS alumni. Jason earned a Master of Advanced Studies (MAS) in Criminology, Law, and Society from the University of California - Irvine. He holds a certificate of completion from the Police Executive Research Forum, Senior Management Institute of Police #68-2018.

JERRY RATCLIFFE

Jerry Ratcliffe is a former British police officer, college professor, and host of the Reducing Crime podcast. He works with police agencies around the world on crime reduction, evidence-based policing, and criminal intelligence strategy. After an ice-climbing accident ended a decade-long career with London's Metropolitan Police, he earned a first-class honors degree and a PhD from the University of Nottingham. He has published over 90 research articles and nine books, including most recently Reducing Crime: A Companion for Police Leaders. Ratcliffe has been a research advisor to the FBI and the Philadelphia Police Commissioner, an instructor for the ATF intelligence academy, and a member of the FBI Law Enforcement Education and Training Council. He is a professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Temple University in Philadelphia, USA.

JESSICA REICHERT

Jessica Reichert has been the Manager of the Center for Justice Research and Evaluation at the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority for over 10 years. She has directed more than 20 research and evaluation projects with extensive experience with quantitative analysis of administrative databases; surveys, interviews, and focus groups; and experimental and quasi-experimental design. Ms. Reichert has published over 90 articles and reports including in peer-reviewed journals. In addition, Ms. Reichert is an instructor at Loyola University Chicago. She earned her master's degree in criminal justice from University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Bradley University.

JOHN ROSIAK

John Rosiak is a passionate educator/trainer who works as a "boundary spanner" using his cross-sector experience to help school and community partnerships develop effective and innovative collaborative efforts around safe and healthy youth. He has worked in a variety of education positions for over 35 years, including directing drug, crime, and violence prevention efforts on the local, national, and international levels. John has worked extensively with school-based law enforcement by developing and delivering training, evaluating School Resource Officers programs, and publishing practitioner-friendly guidance to strengthen SRO programs showing how they can divert youth from justice involvement.

CARRIE SANDERS

Dr. Carrie B. Sanders is Director of the Centre for Research on Security Practices and Associate Professor of Criminology at Wilfrid Laurier University. Her research interests include police technology and organizational change, intelligence and crime analysis, and gender in policing. Her research on police technologies, intelligence analysis, and police women have all received national funding by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada.

KARIN SCHMERLER

Karin Schmerler is the Program Coordinator of the Preventing Repeat Domestic Violence Initiative at the San Diego County District Attorney's Office (SDCDA). Prior to working for the SDCDA, she was a senior public safety analyst with the Chula Vista (California) Police Department (CVPD), where she worked for 17 years on a variety of crime and disorder problems, including disorder at motels, apartments, and business complexes; domestic violence; homeless-related disorder; and vehicle theft. Schmerler also spent 5 years as a social science analyst at the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services at the U.S. Department of Justice, and 7 years as a researcher at the Police Executive Research Forum. Schmerler is the author of the problem-oriented guide for police on disorder at budget motels, and a co-author of Curbing Nuisance Motels: An Evaluation of Police as Place Regulators. Schmerler was a member of the CVPD team that won the 2018 Herman Goldstein Award for a project that reduced domestic violence by 24%, and the 2009 Herman Goldstein Award for a project that cut crime by 70% at Chula Vista motels. She holds a bachelor's degree in public policy studies from Duke University.

ANTHONY STEFANIDIS

Dr. Anthony Stefanidis is the Director of the CINA Center at Mason. CINA is a DHS Center of Excellence on Criminal Investigations and Network Analysis, and pursues a broad, multidisciplinary research portfolio in its academic footprint. Dr. Stefanidis' areas of expertise include the geosocial analysis of social media feeds, and the analysis of digital imagery and video. He has authored over 100 fully refereed papers in his areas of expertise and, in addition to DHS, his research activities have been sponsored by a large number of agencies, including NGA, NSF, and IARPA.

BOLESŁAW SZYMAŃSKI

Dr. Boleslaw K. Szymański (PhD 1976, Computer Science Institute, Warsaw, Poland) is the Claire and Roland Schmitt Distinguished Professor of Computer Science and a Professor of Cognitive Science at RPI. He is the Founding Director of the ARL Social and Cognitive Networks Academic Research Center and of the RPI NEST Center. He published over 400 scientific articles, is a foreign member of the National Academy of Science in Poland, an IEEE Fellow, and a National Lecturer for the ACM. In 2009, he received the Wilkes Medal of British Computer Society and in 2003 the Willey Distinguished Faculty Award from RPI. His current research interests focus on network science and social networks in different applications.

ZHIQUN TANG

Dr. Tang is a Senior Study Director at Westat and a researcher and methodologist with more than 27 years of experience in the implementation and analysis of research in diverse fields of behavioral health and human development. Dr. Tang has diverse data analysis skills. At Westat, she has worked on numerous evaluation studies with various designs (e.g., the Children's Mental Health Initiative (CMHI) National Evaluation, the Evaluation of Evidence-Based Community Wellness and Prevention Programs, the CMHS Transformation Accountability System (TRAC) project, the Population Assessment of Tobacco and Health Study (PATH)). One of them is an NIJ-funded evaluation study of police in schools. Dr. Tang has primarily served as a senior statistician/analyst, leading quantitative data analysis of various kinds as appropriate to address evaluation research questions.

PAIGE THOMPSON

Paige Thompson is a Research Analyst with the Justice Policy Center at the Urban Institute, where her research work focuses on policing technology, gun policy, human trafficking, and the impact of the justice system on fathers, children, and families. ## SAMANTHA VIANO

Dr. Samantha Viano is a faculty member in the Graduate School of Education in the College of Education and Human Development at George Mason University. She joined the Mason faculty after completing her doctoral studies at Peabody College, Vanderbilt University. Dr. Viano's research agenda focuses on evaluating the longitudinal effects of policies and programs that predominately affect at-risk or traditionally-marginalized student populations. Specific research strands that fall within this agenda include school climate and safety, school security, exclusionary discipline, teacher mobility, and online credit recovery. Dr. Viano's work has been supported by the National Institute of Justice Comprehensive School Safety Initiative. She was a 2017 National Academy of Education/Spencer Foundation Dissertation Fellow.

DAVID WEISBURD

Dr. David Weisburd is the Executive Director of the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy. Professor Weisburd is one of the leading international researchers in crime and justice and has received many awards for his contributions to criminology and crime prevention. These include: the Stockholm Prize in Criminology (2010); the Klachky Family Prize for the Advancement of the Frontiers of Science (2011); the Jerry Lee Award for Lifetime Achievement in Experimental Criminology; the Robert Boruch Award for distinctive contributions to research that influences public policy (2014); the Sutherland Award for "outstanding contributions to the discipline of criminology" (2014); the Israel Prize (2015); the ASC Award for "excellence in mentorship in the discipline of Criminology and Criminal Justice" (2016); and the August Vollmer Award for contributions to the prevention of crime (2017). He is author or editor of more than 25 books and more than 175 scientific articles that cover a wide range of criminal justice research topics, including crime at place, violent crime, white collar crime, policing, illicit markets, criminal justice statistics, and social deviance.

CLAIR WHITE

Clair White completed her PhD at Arizona State University in the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice in 2015. After a Postdoctoral Fellowship at the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy at George Mason University, she joined the faculty at the Department Criminal Justice and Sociology at University of Wyoming in 2018. Her research interests include crime and place/communities, policing, and the criminal justice system's response to mental health problems. Currently, her work focuses on police responses to mental health crisis calls and the location of mental health crises in micro-geographic places in Baltimore, as well as other public health issues and social problems at crime hot spots. She also has extensive experience with survey research design and primary data collection.

LAUREN WHITEMAN

Lauren Whiteman is a Public Health Analyst with the Washington/Baltimore High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area. Within that role, Ms. Whiteman works to collect and analyze data, conduct community outreach, and work with both public health and public safety officials to combat the overdose crisis. Prior to her work with HIDTA, Lauren served as Research Program Manager for 5 years at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. She holds a Bachelor's Degree in Sociology and Master's Degree in Public Health.

XIAOYUN WU

Xiaoyun Wu is a doctoral candidate in the Criminology, Law and Society department at George Mason University. Her research interests include policing, deterrence, and crime prevention. Her current work focuses on understanding everyday police proactive activities and deployment and its dynamic relationship with crime and disorder, using various data sources, measurements, and statistical methods. She is currently a Research Associate in the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy at George Mason University and the managing editor for Criminology & Public Policy.

SUE-MING YANG

Sue-Ming Yang is an Associate Professor in the Department of Criminology, Law and Society at George Mason University. She received her PhD from the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice at the University of Maryland. Her current research focuses on understanding the relationship between stereotypes, race, and perceived disorder in urban settings. Specifically, her research findings showed that the presence of physical disorder increased respondents' ratings of overall disorderliness. Additionally, places with the presence of individuals dressed in hip-hop styles and who have darker skin tones were more likely to be viewed as disorderly by experimental respondents (police officers, students, and parolees). She also studies place-based criminology, disorder-crime association, policing mental health problems, experimental research methods, and international terrorism trends and eco-terrorism in the U.S.
