

Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy's First Year Celebration

April 23, 2009

George Mason University
Mason Hall; Fairfax, VA

On April 23rd, the Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy (CEBCP) in the Administration of Justice Department at George Mason University celebrated the successes of the Center's first year at Mason Hall on the George Mason University Fairfax campus.

The event included remarks from University President Alan Merten and College of Humanities and Social Sciences Dean Jack Censer, a panel on advancing evidence-based policy featuring the CEBCP advisory board and moderated by Thomas Feucht of the National Institute of Justice, a keynote address from Peter Neyroud of the UK National Policing Improvement Agency, and a reception.

Photos from the event are included below. Thanks to all who joined us to celebrate the CEBCP.
